IN BRIEF

In the region known as French Tuscany, in the heart of a tourist hot spot sits an amazing example of a period property stuffed full of original features! The cellar walls dating from C13, wallpaper from Napoleon III and a possible Roman pillar! It does require renovation whether this is slowly or using Artisans to create a stunning and individual property as a main home, holiday home or for investment rental units the choice is yours Work to the roof and structural beams was carried out in 2012. All except 2 floors are terracotta. There is a central original C15 "light tube" bringing light to the heart of the building above the central staircase. Windows to the central romantic courtyard with balcony and also far reaching views over the open countryside making use of all the natural light. There is an existing retail unit at 450/month which can be incorporated back into the property...

NOTES

DESCRIPTION

A typical yet very untypical town house! This property has a rental shop to the front with a WC and kitchenette, this could be extended to create a tea room into the courtyard, a gallery, a studio or to incorporate back into the property, maybe a B&B as plenty for guests to see and doonly your imagination holds you back!

Many of the individual and interesting items in the house will remain for the next guardian so a ready made antiques shop!?

There is a possibility to make a roof terrace subject to planning rules.

Lectoure is a historical tourist town with 10 historic listed monuments, bars, restaurants and shops all within walking distance. It also benefits from a Thermal spa and pool. Museum visits, galleries, antique shops, walking, fishing, golf, wine tasting, swimming, canoeing, river boating and balloon flights can be arranged over the magnificent countryside followed by fine dining - you could be on holiday all year round!

Dimensions

Rental unit 30m2 with WC and kitchenette 550/month (could be sold without the tenant) At present access is via the shop however there is an estimate to create a separate independent entrance.
